

Further media consolidation will stifle minority voices and opinions. Not reserving some of the public airways for those people or organizations with less money--selling the public airways to the highest bidder--will lead to a news and media perspective that is uniquely that of the wealthy.